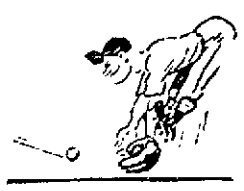
Marion Rookies Take Off for 3-Week Grind at Cardinals' Georgia Camp

BY JIM DARBY

Four Marion baseball hopefuls entrain today for Albany, Ga., where they will report Monday to the St. Louis Cardinals' farm training camp. They are Joe Carl Hookberry of 272 Parker street, Charles Wynn Jr. of 169 West Center street, Leo L. Hockey of 859 South Prospect street and Jack V. Hazzard of 677 Bennett street.



During the next three weeks they will learn their baseball destiny. In a rigorous program a grade tougher than Marion high training, the local boys along with 20 others signed by the Marion club will be observed and classified.

Training starts at daybreak and ends at sunset. In the evening, after the players have collapsed for the night, all managers and scouts have a conference. Names of the players are read off alphabetically and each man present expresses his opinion of the player.

One scout may think a player shows class D promise, another may rate him at least a class C player while still another may say he he should learn to sell insurance. When a majority of managers and scouts give the thumbs down signal on a player at an evening session he is given his unconditional release the next morning.

Keep Complete File

A complete file card is kept on each player where his rating on batting, fielding, throwing, base running, sliding and all talents necessary to be a good ball player are recorded. With the aid of these files, the wheat is separated from the chaff every night.

Toward the end of the training period April 15 a final assignment conference is held. The names are again read off alphabetically and the manager to whom he belongs is allowed first choice. If he does not want the player other Cardinal farm managers are given an opportunity to get him.

When Marion manager Wally Shang brings his selections into Marion about April 15, fans can be sure that all men on the roster have been through a grueling process which showed that they at least had the makings of a baseball player.

Joe Mathes, St. Louis Cardinals farm manager, has promised local officials that he will try to get Marion some players who can be put together for a winning combination this year. Marion is rated by baseball officials as the best class D town in baseball and a winning team is promised as a reward for the enthusiastic support given weak teams in previous years.

Approximately 300 players will work out at the Albany camp and nearly 20 ball clubs will be staffed. Clubs are allowed 23 players during the first 20 days of the season at the end of which time they must strip down to a playing roster of 15. During the last 20 days of the season they are permitted to carry an additional five players.

Training methods consist largely of putting the players through continuous play since scouts believe that method gives them a better chance to see what a player has on the ball than mere batting, fielding or throwing practice. Teams will be picked each other with each [illegible] handling his own signals. During "drills" attention will be given to the fundamentals.

Some May Go Up

A chosen few players signed by class D clubs may show enough promise at this training session to warrant assignment to class B or American Association clubs. The majority, however, are signed to class D or C leagues for the first season.

Y-Indus Spills McMillen; To Face LaRue in Monday's Semi-finals

Cooler and Morral Paired in Gold Medal Tourney

Feed Team's 22-Game Victory String Ends; Finals in Y Meet Due March 30.

Last nights battle of the giants between McMillen and Y-Indus in the quarter-finals of the Gold Medal cage tournament at the Y ended in a 56 to 47 triumph for Y-Indus.

In the other quarter-final games LaRue blasted Green Camp 69 to 29, Universal Cooler took a 47 to 41 win revenge on their Y. M. C. A. league foe Isaly Dairy and Morral Supply Co won over DeMolay Alumni 53 to 40.

Monday Schedule

Monday Y-Indus plays LaRue Merchants at 7:30 p. m. in the first semi-final game and at 8:30 Morral Supply Co. meets Universal Cooler. The winners of these two games will meet Saturday, March 30 for the championship.

In the best game of the evening, Y-Indus, playing heads up ball, took the measure of the big McMillen team. The defeat for McMillen snaps their undefeated string of 22 wins while it marked the 34th win in 37 games for the Y-Indus boys. Y-Indus scored on the first play of the game, but the entire first half was a see-saw battle with the lead changing back and forth.

The score was tied 12 all at the quarter and 21 all at the half. In the third quarter, Y-Indus started fast and built up an 8 point lead that was the right to withstand the high scoring tempo of both teams in the final quarter. Steve O'Dea, great Ohio State football star, played an outstanding offensive game for McMillen, making fine shots. For the local boys Mulvaine and Roseberry were the high scorers with 18 and 18 points respectively, but the teamwork of the Y-Indus was very good with every man contributing to the score.

Foes Start Slow

The LaRue Merchants - Green Camp game started slow with both teams unable to find the range the first half. The merchants held a margin of 8-6 at the quarter, and at half time led 14-10. In the last half LaRue ran wild with everyone in the lineup hitting the basket. The scoring of the winners was evenly distributed with V. Martin of Green Camp high with eight points.

Universal Cooler and Isaly Dairy gave the fans their share of excitement. The game was fast with Cooler getting a slight lead in the first quarter and holding on. Petrie and McAndrews were big guns for Cooler; McAndrews kept the Cooler out in front the first half while Petrie took over after intermission. Harbolt of Isaly again paced his team with Roberts contributing eight points.

Morral Builds Lead

Morral Supply's big team made a big first half pay off against DeMolay. Williams and Heller of Morral led the way as Morral built up a 28-8 lead in the second quarter before DeMolay could get going. Score by halftime found Morral out in front 39-20. DeMolay rallied in the third quarter to come within four points of Morral, but Morral edged away to win 53-40. D. Newland and Heller led the team with 21 and 17 points while McGinnis was high with 14 for the losers.

REDS AND INDIANS SET FOR TWIN BILL

Feller-Vander Meer Battle To Pack in Fans.

By The Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla., March 23—The Cincinnati Reds' schedule brought the New York Yankee second-stringers to Plant Field today but interest of Grapefruit league fans was focused on tomorrow's twin bill with the Cleveland Indians.

The Sunday doubleheader will feature a five-inning mound duel between two of the fastest hurlers in baseball, Indian Bob Feller and Reding Johnny Vander Meer.

The Reds have won two wins over the American leaguers, 6-4 and 8-3, so far this spring.

Yesterday, the Reds snapped a six-game winning streak for the St. Louis Cardinals by edging them, 5-4, after the Cards had won the first game of a doubleheader, 3-2.

Bucky Walters Needs 20-Game Year to Crash '200 Club'

Cincy Star Works Like Real Trooper in Training Camp.

By CHIP ROYAL
AP Newsfeatures Sports Editor

TAMPA, Fla.—Probably no one ever worked any harder to become a pitcher than Bucky Walters of the Cincinnati Reds—and he's still doing it at 35, after 15 seasons in the majors.

If every ballplayer had the spirit and ambition of the six foot one right hander, the sport would be overflowing with enthusiasm.

Bucky is all over the field when he isn't throwing, he's holding down his old third base spot, or is chasing far and wide for grounders at short, second or first.

Even Shags Flies

Usually barrenchested, sometimes he chases flies in the outfield.

"I think there is only one way to get in shape for a season," smiles Walters "and that is to work. You can have all the calisthenics you want. Let a guy bend down to stop a few grounders, then make him reach for some, and brother, he's getting the right kind of exercise."

Bucky played second and third from 1931 to 1934 for the Boston Red Sox and Braves. Then he went to the Phils for a hot corner job. The next thing anyone knew, Mrs. Walters son, William, was a baseball.

Lucky To Be with Phils

"Well, I wanted to remain in the big time, and the only way I could was to become a pitcher," is the way he explains it.

"That was quite an association for me. I learned about a dozen ways off one after I started."

Of course I was lucky to be in the old Phils organization then. If you could do anything at all in baseball, they wouldn't let you go.

"I knew I couldn't make the grade as an infielder, so I started throwing them. One day Jimmy Wilson, my manager then, said 'I'm going to let you pitch against the Reds in a couple of days. So get ready.'

Bucky Walters, right, has compiled 180 victories in 12 years on the mound yet he is always ready to pick up some advice from other pitchers. He is shown chatting with Hal Newhouser, most valuable player in the American League the past two seasons during which time he won 54 games for the Tigers.

Faces Tough Task at 35, With Reds Not Much Help.

"But, I was determined I was going to be a major leaguer. I spent every minute I could out on the mound, studied every batter and pitcher I could see, and tried not to forget a thing."

"Well, kid, you sure made good," smiled Wilson, now a coach of the Reds, who happened to hear Bucky's last remark. "And I notice you still have to win those close ones. You know you need only 20 more to get in the 200 victories club!"

Sees Tough Ride

"So I heard," grinned Walters. "But they've come a little tougher this year. I'm going to have to do more throwing than pitching. There's quite a difference. But I know all the tricks the hitters know, and should be able to hold my own if the arm hangs on."

Bucky is a great cheerleader for Bill Nicholson, his manager.

"He's the greatest of them all in that regard," assures the big fellow. "He has the knack of putting a few mistakes in a way you never make them again.

"But never gives up on a player. If anyone can't make the grade with him, it's because the player gave up himself."

The Reds may finish last in the National League—they lack playing talent—but the spirit of Walters is going to make them tough, especially when he's pitching.

Mar-O-Del Golf Course Opens Sunday—Weather Permitting

Weather permitting, Mar-O-Del golf course will open tomorrow, it was announced today by Marion E. Hinklin, county treasurer, who with Harry V. Mounts, county auditor, has been operating the course for the past three years.

Some remodeling has been done on the club house and more will be undertaken when materials become available. Drinking fountains and shelters will be constructed as soon as possible, he said.

Equipment valued at $2,000 which has been on order for the last three years is beginning to arrive and Mr. Hinklin stated there will be plenty of synthetic golf balls available.

BUCKEYES UNDERDOG IN TONIGHT'S BATTLE

North Carolina's Sharp Five Gets 8-Point Nod.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, March 23—North Carolina's smooth, sharpshooting cagers have been made eight-point favorites to defeat Ohio State's Buckeyes in the finals of the eastern NCAA basketball tournament in Madison Square Garden tonight.

The Tarheels, who boasted a 28-4 record before the tourney, displayed uncanny accuracy in whipping New York university's crack Violets for the second time 57-49, in the semi-finals Thursday.

Even after that high calibre display, Lt. Bernie Carnevale said his boys "could have done better," which didn't make Ohio State Mentor Harold Olsen feel too happy.

The Buckeyes conquered Harvard 46-38 and Olsen admitted he hadn't suffered so much on the bench in 20 years. Olsen, however, believes the Buckeyes will be "up" for the final and show some of the form they exhibited in winning the Big Ten title and compiling a 14-4 season slate.

The winner of the North Carolina-Ohio State tilt will clash with the western NCAA champions in the Garden Tuesday. The Oklahoma Aggies and California will meet for the western title in Kansas City tonight. The Aggies advanced by walloping Baylor 44-29 last night while California upset Colorado 50-44.

Middies, Farmer Doped to Win

By The Associated Press

The peoples' choice and the dopesters' choice today were the favorites to take Ohio's high school basketball championships.

The people's choice was tiny Farmer, the little school of 37 boys from a population of 100 which breezed to the finals of the Class "B" tournament against Worthington.

The dopesters' choice was Middletown and there you have a terrific ball club. They crushed Toledo Woodward, 53 to 29, without working up much of a sweat.

Tonight they were to clash with an amazing Akron North quintet which upset the dope with a 43 to 39 victory over East Liverpool.

Worthington Still In

Farmer was to put its title hopes on the block against Worthington which squeezed past Waynesburg, 24 to 23 after the latter team had won 26 ball games in a row.

Farmer skipped past Bradford, 57 to 39.

The mighty Middies of Middletown and those up from nowhere Vikings from Akron North are both former champions but the customers looked them over last night and promptly established the unbeaten Middies as the favorites to take their second state title in three years.

Akron North, with a terrific zone defense and a red hot blond —Jim Smythy—came from behind last night to whip East Liverpool.

East Liverpool, with only three defeats all season, rated as a decided favorite over the Akronites.

Then when it came to Middletown and Toledo Woodward it was just a case that the Middies had too much and too soon as they triumphed 53 to 25.

Two comparative darkhorses—Worthington's Cardinals and the Tigers of Farmer High school—tangle tonight at Springfield.

Both victors were rated as underdogs going into the semifinal playoffs. Worthington had the worst season record of the four contenders, 24 wins in 27 starts. And Farmer's Tigers was the tiniest team in the joust.

Waynesburg was favored on the basis of its previous record of 26 victories without a loss this season. The dopesters liked Bradford because the Railroaders eliminated Northridge's defending Class B champs in last week's regional tourney play.

Storybook Finish

The Worthington-Waynesburg tray ended in weird fashion.

With four minutes left, Worthington got the ball and decided to stall. And the strategy worked.

Waynesburg committed seven fouls trying to recover the ball in those final four minutes, but the Cardinals refused to try for free throws, taking the ball out of bounds to retain possession.

LOVE'S FAIR HORIZON

By ADELE GARRISON

MARY turned a ruleful face to her uncle at my invitation.

"I feel exactly as if I were a small boy three generations ago being called into the woodshed for a larruping," she said.

"It isn't that bad," I told her, laughing, although secretly I felt that her premonition was somewhat justified.

"I don't know which was worse," Dicky interpolated, "those woodshed wallopings, or the modern way of letting kids smash everything to smitherneens, so they can develop their personalities."

"You can't accuse Auntie Madge of using the modern treatment," Mary said, edging toward the bedroom. "I'd like to see youngsters under her care try to develop their personalities by throwing things."

"Oh—her!" Dickie scoffed with a grin. "I expect to have her summoned to court any day by the S.F.T.P.O.C.X.T.C., or a reasonable abbreviation thereof."

"If you don't stop talking and delaying the game—" I threatened from the bedroom door.

"Remember—I'm in a wheel chair," he called after me with a chuckle, as I went through the door and closed it after me.

Mary faced me tensely when I had turned to her.

Georges Hobbled

"What's happened now?" she queried. "Don't tell me Georges is on the prowl again! I thought Grandpa Spencer had him hobbled."

"No Georges is safe in the hideaway, and will be on his way overseas very soon," I told her, simulating a placid calm I did not feel. "But sit down. I'm not going to tell you anything while you're standing up. That's right!" as she took a chair opposite the one in which I already had seated myself.

"Now relax!" I made the words militant. "What I'm going to tell you isn't serious. It's mostly amusing, but there's a bit of irritating annoyance in it for you, or so I fear, and I want to put you on your guard so you'll know what to expect at the luncheon."

"At the luncheon?" she queried blankly. "You mean the one my darling step-mamma-in-law is flinging today?"

"I don't know of any other," I retorted. "Do you?"

Threw Up Her Hand

She threw up her hand with a warding-off gesture.

"It's against the law, I think, to brick-bat a nit-wit," she said, "and that's what I am this morning. I'll promise not to speak again, if you'll tell me what's up."

"You'll be speaking many words, and emphatic ones," I told her, "before I get through. First, I must tell you that after she had issued the invitations to the luncheon, Olga slipped away without Olina's knowledge—Philip kept her occupied so she did not miss her mother—and came down to see me in the boys' suite. I arranged that so she wouldn't run into anybody else."

"How much blackmail did the boys impose?" Mary asked with a grin, forgetting her promise not to interrupt.

A Light Price

"Surprisingly Light," I told her with an answering grin. "The price of soft drinks, sandwiches and ice cream."

"Those two lads are just naturally going to burst someday," she commented. "But go on! Awfully sorry I talked out of turn."

"I didn't expect anything else," I said placidly.

"Ouch! Also meow!" she retorted. "But—forgive and give!"

"Olga was terribly distressed," I said, "partly because, I think, she does not quite like the way Olina is behaving, but mostly because she does not wish you to be hurt. You see, Olina is planning to announce her betrothal to Georges at the luncheon today."

Penicillin in Pneumonia

A PNEUMONIA patient is always a worry to physicians, especially because pneumonia may be due to so many different kinds of organisms. The sulfonamide drugs have been proven to be potent weapons in fighting pneumonia produced by most pneumoccus germs, but penicillin is equally as effective as the sulfonamides in treating this kind of pneumonia, according to Dr. Manson Meads and his co-workers of Boston.

They think that the penicillin may be given at the first sign of pneumonia due to germs or may be used if the sulfonamides have failed to clear up the pneumonia. They think, also that penicillin should be given to all patients who are extremely ill, to those who have a lessening of the number of white cells in the blood or severe heart, kidney or liver damage.

Then, too, there are certain patients who are sensitive to the sulfonamide drugs, and they, according to Dr. Meads and his co-workers, also should be treated with penicillin.

If the sulfonamide has been administered for a period of 24 hours in sufficient quantity and the symptoms of pneumonia do not begin to disappear, penicillin should be started at once. The presence of the pneumococcus germs in the blood clear rapidly after the first dose of penicillin and complications are in this way avoided. In most instances, fever and other symptoms disappear within 48 hours. Occasionally, the patient begins to feel much better even earlier.

Dr Meads and his co-workers studied 54 patients with pneumonia. The sulfonamide drugs had failed to control the infection in about one-third of them, but these cases were brought under control by the penicillin. In most instances, large doses of the penicillin were administered on the fourth day of the illness. The amount of the penicillin and the duration of its use depended on the severity of the disease.

In addition to the use of penicillin the patient is given plenty of fluids, oxygen if necessary, such drugs as digitalis to help support the heart, and sedative or quieting drugs, when needed. If there is some delay in response to the penicillin it may be the result of not giving enough.

Unfavorable reactions to penicillin occur quite infrequently. Sometimes there is a mild burning sensation at the point where the preparation is injected into a muscle if it is given by injection. Now and then, there may be a rash resembling measles but this disappears within a short time.

It would seem that penicillin is a most valuable aid in treating many cases of pneumonia caused by pneumococcus germs.

Make Sure of Good Lighting for Homes Both Day and Night

YOUR HOME TODAY and TOMORROW

by W. Wadsworth Wood

Proper Day and Night Lighting for Homes.

Home lighting is divided into two distinct classifications: natural lighting and artificial lighting. Both have benefited by good sound study on the part of architects and lighting engineers, until now the average house can have proper lighting both by day and by night. The cost of it will not exceed that of interior lighting.

Good day lighting begins with the correct designing of the house so that there is an abundance of sunlight admitted to the interior during the daytime. This means more and larger windows than have usually been placed in the walls, but it also means care in placing them so that a room will have sufficient wall space to accommodate furniture. It means a generous use of glass block where an operative window is impractical but light is desired. It means the use of ceiling windows, placed high up in the wall and out of the way of the room activities. In short it means the use of plenty of glass. If the new insulated variety is used there will be no additional heating problem.

Guard Against Shadows

Good day lighting also means the elimination of overshadowing porches and deep eaves or overhanging roofs, as it is useless to provide generous window surface and then mask it. For a cheerful modern home let the light in.

Good artificial lighting starts with the proper planning of the fixture and plug outlets. The use to which each room is to be put must dictate the location, amount and type of lighting that it will be furnished with. For instance the bathroom mirror must have a light on both sides of it, and the kitchen work counter a light directly over it so that no shadow will be cast.

Safety Element Important

The question of safety enters very strongly in artificial lighting practice as it is understood today. There must be no dark stairways or corners. There should be switches at the doorways so that a room maybe lighted before it is entered. There should be a switch at the top of the stairs controlling the light below. There should be lights at all entrances, and there should be a master switch which will throw on every light in the house and which should be located in the upper hall, or in the master bedroom of a one story house. This is sometimes called the burglar switch.

Make Careful Study

The home builder or homeowner should investigate the merits of fluorescent lighting which has been brought to a high degree of perfection, he should study his lighting problems and solve them in a practical manner. He will find little or no difference in cost between good complete lighting comfort and haphazard lighting, other than the cost of his own investigation.

CHIMNEY SAFETY

Recipe for a fire-safe chimney: Construction throughout — solid brick or stone masonry; walls — good and thick; lining—refractory fire clay; height—well above the roof and any nearby projection; safety measure — spark arrester. If you've got all these features, you can probably turn on the heat without a worry that your "Worry-bird" won't be able to handle.

WHY WASTE COAL?

One of a series of articles intended to help solve heating problems and conserve fuel.

Early spring, like late fall, involves a problem of maintaining the fire in a hand-fired heating plant, yet keeping it small, according to the reduced need for heat. Many solve this problem by building a light fire early in the morning, allowing it to go out before noon, and then repeating the process early in the evening. It is less trouble to maintain a fire continuously, although if this is done improperly it will result in overheating at times.

Coal has the property of remaining ignited with very little draft. Too frequently this property in coal is not taken advantage of, due perhaps to a lack of understanding of this characteristic. On warm days, do not shake the grates, but allow ash to accumulate on them. Fire the regular amount of coal (which should be from 30 to 60 pounds if fired by the alternate method) on alternate sides of the firebox. Keep the ashpit door tightly closed, the holes in the firing door one-fourth to one-half open, and the check-draft open so that only enough draft is maintained to prevent smoke from coming out the firing door into the basement. With a furnace or boiler in good condition, that is, one which does not have numerous leaks to allow unwanted air to be drawn in a fire may be held from one to two days by this method without any attention at all. Small amounts of coal placed in the furnace will probably either burn out too rapidly or will go out because there is not enough mass of ignited coal to maintain ignition temperature. There must be a sufficient quantity of coal in the furnace, but its rate of burning must be carefully regulated by the draft controls. A little experimenting in this respect will pay big dividends in heating satisfaction.

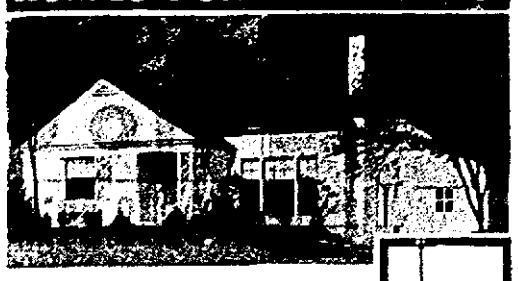
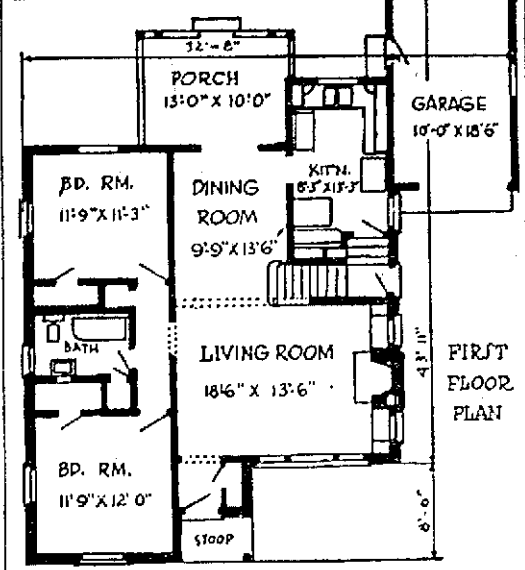
HOMES FOR AMERICANS





By The Associated Press

Designed for a deep, narrow lot, this house is recommended by The American Builder magazine for comfortable secluded living in congested suburban areas. The integrated bedrooms and adjoining bath on the first floor separate the sleeping quarters from the rest of the house. A master bedroom, bath room and ample storage space take up all of the second floor. Construction features are asphalt shingles on the roof; dampproofed basement walls, laundry, drying rooms and complete automatic heating equipment in the basement and attached garage at the rear.

ADVICE ABOUT GARAGES

When the family car is housed under the same roof as the family, there is an ever-present fire hazard unless special precautions are taken in the construction of the garage wing. The walls and ceiling should be solid and fire-resistant and the door connecting with the house insulated and self-closing. The floor should be graded to eliminate those hollows in which gasoline vapors can collect. An Underwriters' Laboratories' approved fire extinguisher should always be in place on the wall just inside the door—just in case!

WATER "MIXER"

Is the water from your hot water faucets too hot? A simple, sturdy thermostatic mixing valve is available which will automatically add cold water to hot water in order to provide blended water at any temperature for which it has been set by the user. The device delivers water at any desired temperature from 0 degrees up to 200 degrees, says the Plumbing and Heating Industries Bureau.

THE GARDEN CLINIC

By VICTOR H. RIES
O. S. U. Extension Floriculturist.

Q. The other day a friend said she had changed the color of her African violet by placing a few earthworms in the pot. Do you think there is anything to this?—Mrs. F.S., Sandusky, O.

A. Earthworms do wonders when used as bait for fish, but I am afraid your friend was mistaken when she attributed the powers of changing the color of a flower to them. There may have been two separate plants in the same pot. Otherwise most differences in African violets are found in seedlings.

Q. We received a begonia for Christmas; I don't know the name, but the florist said it just bloomed at Christmas. So would like to know how to take care of it so it will bloom again for us. Would like a leaflet on its care if you have them. Sorry I do not know the real name.—Mrs. L.A.W., Canton, O.

A. I would not attempt to identify the variety of the begonia you have. However, our leaflet on begonias will enable you to identify the type yours is and care for it accordingly.

Q. Having read your suggestions "Keeping Poinsettias," in a recent issue of Ohio Farmer, am still in doubt about what is best to do with one I have. This plant was started last spring as a slip from an older plant. It has grown until now it measures about 18 inches in height. About the first of December it began dropping leaves, and also put out a bud, which was out in full by Christmas. Shortly after, all leaves fell, the bloom dropped a few petals (there was only one flower) but it is still hanging on and has sent out three or four new shoots. Should I wait until those leaves leaves fall to put in cellar or do so as soon as flower petals fall?

Am very anxious that this plant thrive, as I have lost some before. Would be pleased to have a reply, and if it is more convenient to reply through your articles in Ohio Farmer, will be very thankful for any information I may be able to obtain.—Mrs. H.E.B., Bethesda, O.

A. It really does not make very much difference whether you keep your poinsettia growing on for a few more weeks in the house or whether you put it down in the cellar and let it go dormant. I would rather put it out of sight when it begins to look rather unattractive.

FIRE PROTECTION

If the main staircase in your house were cut off by fire, could your family get out? A secondary, enclosed staircase, a porch or garage roof outside the windows, a ladder-like trellis for climbing plants—these are some of the means of escape you might be thinking about incorporating into the plans for your new home.

Emphasis Placed On Rental Housing Need

Government policies to encourage the building of a great volume of rental housing are urgently needed, according to the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

"There are far more veterans who want to rent in the next year or two than those who want to buy homes immediately," the association said. "It is necessary that there be a positive stand taken by the government to give rental housing builders confidence to operate. Every housing development involves risk for the developer. When this ordinary business risk is accentuated with risks imposed by inconsistent governmental policy and changing rules, builders and developers cannot function effectively.

"The enactment of a new Title VI to give builders 90 per cent FHA insurance has been advanced as one means of encouragement of rental housing in greater volume but no single device will reach the result unless the entire housing economy makes sense to the builder. He not only must be able to get material and labor but he needs to know that he will not be kept from getting a return on his investment because of new and changing edicts by government agencies."

FIRST AID TO AILING HOUSE

—By ROGER C. WHITMAN—

ENAMEL CRACKING

Q. Three years ago we had our woodwork enameled white, using the best grade of undercoat and enamel. This fall, soon after we turned on the heat, thousands of cracks appeared on the door panels and in the baseboards. We have a coal furnace, but always keep water in the pan. The cracks are bad. what can be done to cover them or prevent them getting worse? If the trouble is caused by the enamel, why should it come after three years use?

A. The enamel may not have been as good as you thought it was and with age it has become so brittle and inelastic that it cannot expand and contract with the surfaces to which it was applied. Cracking is the result. Another possible cause for the cracking is the application of paint or enamel over a dusty surface. Go over the cracked parts with sandpaper to get a smooth surface, wipe with turpentine and then apply a top coat of quality enamel.

Amazingly light
Would you believe that this NEW 'Budgit' Chain Block weighs only 81 lbs. in two-ton size, 59 lbs. in the one-ton size, and only 48 lbs. in the ¾ and ½-ton capacity? It is true. For a brand new design and the liberal use of alloy steels and stampings have produced these astonishingly low weights.
Would you believe that this 'Budgit' Chain Block lifts easier and faster than other standard spur-geared hoist in the market? This, also, is true. Anti-friction bearings throughout and all working parts enclosed in a grease-filled sealed chamber, make this possible.
It takes much less physical effort to lift weight with the 'Budgit' Chain Block — so the worker likes it.
It is perfectly balanced with or without load — another element of modern, correct design. So is the roller type load chain.
The 'Budgit' Chain Block is equipped with an automatic brake which prevents the load from descending except at the will of the operator.
'Budgit' Chain Blocks are built to lift up to ¼, ½, 1 and 2 tons and prices start at $59.50 list. Send for Bulletin No. 357.

EMANUEL LUTHERAN CHURCH was the scene of the wedding of Miss Mary Jane Tate, daughter of Councilman Charles H Tate and Mrs. Tate of 188 Pranconia avenue, and Richard E Weiler, son of Mrs. Clara Weiler of 273 Bellevue avenue, last evening. The couple repeated the double ring service read at 8 30 o'clock by the pastor, Rev. M I Hollensen before the candlelit altar decorated with white flowers and greenery.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a two-piece suit in a lime shade with which she combined a white flower hat and brown accessories and carried a small bouquet of gardenias and white roses. Her only attendant was Miss Anne Calcaterra who was costumed in an aqua suit with black accessories. Her flowers were a corsage of red roses.

Robert Weiler, brother of the bridegroom, served as his best man

The bride wore the bridegroom's gift, a Swiss wrist watch. Her gift to her attendant was a rhinestone bracelet.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs Tate chose a gray suit with yellow accessories and her flowers were yellow roses The bridegroom's mother was costumed in blue and black accessories and wore a corsage of white roses.

Preceding the ceremony there was a program of organ music by Mrs William Ackerman, Jr She played "On the Lilting Springtime," Stebbins, "I Bring a Love Song," Romberg, "To You," Speaks, and "One Alone," Romberg, and for the processional and recessional, the traditional wedding marches During the ceremony she played "All For You," and the hymn, "At Cana Lord, Thou Didst Appear."

Blue and white, the bride's wedding colors, were used in a decorative theme for the reception at which Mr. and Mrs. Tate were hosts at the Manor House The table held a tiered bridal cake encircled with greenery, and lighted with tall white tapers.

The bride was graduated from Harding High school in 1943 and attended Bowling Green university. The bridegroom is a graduate of Harding High school, class of 1939, and recently was discharged from the U. S. Army after serving more than a year with an engineering corps in the European theater of operations They will make their home in Columbus where the bridegroom is enrolled in the engineering department at Ohio State university.

New World Held Chief Hope for Battered Europe

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
AP World Traveler

PARIS, March 23—France's appeal for assistance in inaugurating her five-year economic plan is symptomatic of the shocking distress which blankets most of Europe and special envoy Leon Blum quite likely is only breaking trail for a long line of applicants from other nations.

Of course the big problem of the moment in most countries of the old world is to find food, on the basis that if you are starving it doesn't matter a tinker's dam how much money you have in your pocket unless it will buy something to eat. However, I take it that in the long run a full cupboard is dependent on a full purse, which means that there can be no permanent cure for hunger unless the economic situation is sound.

Dewitt Mackenzie

There was hunger in Europe after the first world conflict, and there was economic disturbance, but it was a happy interlude as compared with what is happening now. As this column has remarked before, you've got to be here in Europe and see these things in order to get a full realization of the extent of the catastrophe.

The total war which Hitler inaugurated truly belonged to the atomic age. It not only stopped the wheels of progress but it destroyed the means of recovery. Those means now must come largely from the western hemisphere.

Did Complete Job

That's why we find France knocking at our door. She's one of the hard hit countries. Her present misfortune is due to various reasons, including political confusion and spiritual hurt, but we find enough cause for economic distress in the despoilment of this great country by the Hitlerites.

Here, as in most other occupied territories, the Nazis not only sent thousands of citizens to servitude in Germany but plundered the country of equipment essential to keep the economic wheels turning. For instance, much of the rolling stock of the railroads was run off for use in Germany and other invaded countries. Factories were stripped of machinery, and machine tools were stolen wholesale.

In short, when the war ended France had been so crippled that she lacked the basic means of recovery and had to look abroad for help. The same is true of most other countries which were overrun by Hitler. Another case in hand is little Holland which has been negotiating credits in Washington.

When I was in Holland a month ago, Prime Minister Schermerhorn told me that the Germans had taken all but 15 per cent of the country's rolling stock. There is such a shortage of machinery and machine tools due to Nazi plundering, that it has been impossible to get industry under way or do repairs.

The question naturally arises why these stolen railway cars and the industrial machinery aren't returned to France, Holland and the other despoiled countries. Well, a little of the plunder is finding its way back, but I remind you again that this has been a total war. Much of the tremendous amount of wealth which Hitler collected in Germany was destroyed in the Allied hurricane that swept the Reich.

Then, too, even where machinery and various kinds of supplies are found intact, it frequently is difficult to determine ownership. I was talking the other day with a famous Dutch manufacturer who told me of losing an invaluable trainload of material to the Germans.

Hard to Identify

What appears to be this material has now been found in one of the occupied zones of Germany but there is no way of making positive identification, and consequently the Dutch firm can't get it back.

So the stricken countries of Europe must turn to the United States for the wherewithal to rehabilitate themselves, since there's no other nation which has the necessary resources.

The degree of distress in different parts of Europe naturally varies greatly. France is one of those which have been hard hit, and it occupies an exceptionally important position as the wheelhorse of the western part of the continent.

The Injustice of Justice

IN ORDERING a firing-squad death for Gen. Masaharu Homma, the military commander who won the battle of Bataan and subsequently was officially responsible for the infamous death march, Gen. MacArthur defends the American version of justice for war criminals. But he did not go far enough.

Gen. Homma was given the benefit of an extended and full trial. The verdict of his guilt was reviewed by the United States supreme court with two members dissenting from the majority decision that the verdict was proper. By means of the publicity which attended these proceedings, public opinion not only in Japan but also in the United States was enabled to know the official position that a military commander should bear responsibility for the misdeeds of subordinates.

It was beyond the fondest dreams of the men who conceived the plan of trying German and Japanese war criminals that the justice agreed to would be accepted without any dissent or misgivings. Dissent by a minority is the normal reaction from verdicts of justice in the United States. In this instance dissent has been expressed even in our own supreme court. But that does not mean there has been any miscarriage of justice as Americans understand it. There has been no betrayal of our own code of ethics. It must not be forgotten that if Japan and Germany had won the war and now were dealing with "war criminals" there would be no trials, no appeals and no dissent.

There's Always the Weather

ON THE first day of spring international affairs were haywire, management and labor were still circling each other suspiciously, politics was building up to an election-year crescendo of name-calling, and there were 10,000,000 fresh outbursts of rage against OPA.

It was hard to find a new shirt and almost impossible to find butter. The black market flourished, and the usual number of overweight patriots were sure war with Russia was only a matter of time. Baseball players who started out like a house afire in spring training camps were beginning to find their level, and the atomic bomb was still suspended by a flimsy thread over the addled heads of the genus homo, its inventors.

But in all respects the weather was satisfactory. The first day of spring was finer than anyone dared to believe it would be. There's always the weather to fall back on. Occasionally it's perfect.

No Offense Intended

AMERICANS are honestly interested in the charge by one of Russia's controlled newspapers that the forthcoming atomic bomb tests are an effort to intimidate the world and set up some sort of atomic imperialism.

This is exactly the wrong impression that Americans would like to avoid. It is one of the reasons why there has been no popular rush to acclaim the idea of testing the bomb. There has been, instead, a great deal of soul-searching about the whole subject of atomic explosions.

If the Russians were in possession of all the background facts about the atomic bomb in American hands, they would know that delegates to the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ, representing a vast section of public opinion, recently adopted a resolution which stated that Americans should atone for the horrible results of the only bombs used in warfare and renounce further use of so horrible a weapon against helpless human beings. They would know that there is no wish among the American people stronger than the wish that something might happen to secure the safety of every person alive against the possibility of another war in which atomic bombs would be used.

They also would know that the forthcoming demonstrations are being regarded by the American people with a mixture of horror and skepticism—horror because there is so deadly an instrument of destruction to test, skepticism because many Americans, not understanding what remains to be found out, wonder if the demonstrations are not chiefly to satisfy the curiosity of their own military men. It is apparently just another one of those cases where Americans give offense without intending to give it.

Trip Leaves Tasks Unfinished

By WALTER LIPPMANN

Off to Europe, Writer Thinks of Things Undone.

If THE airplanes run on schedule, I shall be arriving in Germany just about when this article is published. For several weeks while traveling there and in the neighboring countries I shall not be writing—never having learned, though I have always envied those who have, the art of shooting from the hip.

From a hurried tour of this sort no one must expect, it seems to me, to bring back new truth, much less the whole truth. Certainly I shall not suppose that I am a one-man Gallup poll and know just what percentage of the people of each country think what on all the great issues of the day. Even after talking with two cabinet ministers, a general, a labor leader, a banker and five waiters in each country, I do not expect to have an accurate picture of public opinion.

Yet if, for example, one is interested in mountain climbing but cannot climb the mountains, it is better than nothing to have looked up at them from the valley below. It is a little easier to understand what men are meaning to say who have actually tried to climb them.

Things Undone

When anyone who writes regularly, indeed chronically, stops writing, he usually goes on for a while imagining the articles he would have written if he had not stopped. For silence is also a habit which like other good habits has to be acquired with effort. For my own part I can now think of half a dozen articles which I meant to write before leaving.

First and foremost would have been one arguing as urgently as possible that, with all the fervor and insistence that we ever put into any national campaign, we organize every American community to save more food than is comfortable and to export more of it to the hungry than we can conveniently spare. Here is a cause which is good and great under every flag, political system and ideology, and transcends them all. It is a cause, moreover, in which if we fail to respond, we shall not easily be able to forgive ourselves.

Next, I should like to have argued not only for the prompt ratification of British loan, but for the development of a program of credits, conceived not as a banking transaction, but as an act of high policy, for France. The only real question about all these credits is to arrange them in such a way that they do not nullify themselves by adding to the inflationary pressure on our markets.

But that can be arranged if the use of the credits is properly spaced over a sufficient period of time, and carefully controlled and allocated and adjusted to the supply of goods.

This would have led to a discussion of our own domestic problems of regulating the transition from the war economy to free markets. The argument has been best presented, so it seems to me, by Mr. Seymour Harris of Harvard University in a communication published by the Washington Post on March 19. It is, in substance, that the inflationary pressure is not the same in all the markets.

In some it will soon disappear because the supply of goods will soon be abundant, in others, notably in residential housing, it will continue for a considerable time since, with all possible construction, there cannot be enough houses soon enough. For this reason, the end of deficit financing, though of great importance, cannot itself be a sufficient remedy against inflation. It is necessary to continue the selective control of goods and prices in those particular markets where supply cannot for a period of time be equal to demand.

No War, No Peace

Much might have been said also about the necessity of accepting the view that for some years to come our military establishment must be kept very much above any normal peacetime standard. We are not at war. I do not believe we are going to be at war again. But we are not at peace.

We are in a period between

OIL BUT NOT BANANA VARIETY

It's good to see the executive and legislative branches of the government working so closely together.

As when, for instance, in withdrawing the nomination of Ed Pauley, the President saved the Senate the trouble of rejecting it.

Pauley? Pauley is the California oil man who served as treasurer of the Democratic party. Truman named him undersecretary of the navy on the theory that a man who can float a million dollar deficit should have no trouble with boats.

It was Pauley's appointment that precipitated Harold Ickes' resignation. The latter had come to feel the Truman administration was running too much like a well-greased machine.

Pauley couldn't cope with Ickes, not having had experience with that type of gusher.

The senate would have rejected Pauley. He smelled too much of oil. The Senate is used to oil. But only of the banana variety.

Incidentally, Dumb Dora was amazed to read that Pauley was an oil man. She thought it was rubber from the way he bounced.

Goodwill in UNO Office

Workers Radiate International Friendship.

INTERIM HEADQUARTERS . . . Women of UNO in converted gym at Hunter College in New York . . .

By ADELAIDE KERR
Associated Press Writer

THE women of the United Nations secretariat have managed to make the organization yield international understanding before the delegates begin work at its interim headquarters in New York.

As they set up files and arranged desks at Hunter college, where the Security Council will begin deliberations March 25, comments like these could be heard.

"The British are grand to work with. Who started the idea that they have no sense of humor?" . . . "I like this friendly American atmosphere." . . . "The French certainly pay attention to details" . . . "He was saying he didn't see why a dime should be worth more than a nickel, when it's so much smaller, but I pointed out to him that the British penny is a little bigger than a half crown."

To date most of the women members of the Secretariat, whose workers will be drawn from all the United Nations, are American and British. Outstanding among them is pretty British-born Isobel Wallace, assistant to Waldo Chamberlin, documents officer, who is responsible for reproducing the documentation and press releases for the entire conference.

Mrs. Wallace, who is a sister of Nancy Turner, head of the typing bureau at the League of Nations, expects to follow the same system she used at the United Nations Assembly proceedings in London, where she sent her stenographers into council and assembly halls in relays. Each girl took notes for a ten-minute stretch, came out and cut a stencil, and in 30 minutes had a verbatim record of the proceedings she covered hanging on the press room walls—often while the speaker was still talking.

"We did three and a half million pages of documentation from January 10 to the end of the conference," said Mrs. Wallace. "Sometimes we worked all night. I think the United Nations' work is the most important thing in the world and I made the girls feel that what they were doing was so important they gave up their personal lives."

Most of the women of the Secretariat, who worked amid the din of hammers and screech of saws as college classrooms were being transformed to United Nations headquarters, voiced the same enthusiasm for their work.

"This is not a job," said dark-eyed Beverly Riegel, between directions to the stream of callers who filed past her desk in the gymnasium building. "This is working for something you believe in. I was a teacher in training at George Washington High School and I dropped it to come here. I just got out of Hunter—and here I am back. But I'll not be sorry."

In nearby Davis Building, other girls screened applicants for jobs under the direction of WAVE Commander Grace Cheney and Miss Mary McNerney, regional supervisor of the U. S. Civil Service Commission.

Nearly all the secretarial women hope for higher jobs in the United Nations ranks. One receptionist wants to be a liason officer, another hopes for personnel work and a distribution clerk, who is studying law at night, dreams of using that profession somewhere in the United Nations framework.

Pirate Gold Sought

By The Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG — Leading authorities here believe there is some foundation for stories that there is a substantial treasure in gold and silver coins hidden on the lonely island of Tristan da Cunha, but the expedition now being fitted out in England to search for it will have to face considerable difficulties.

"The rumor was well known on the island," said A. B. Crawford, of Pretoria, who has just returned from Tristan. "The ancestors of the present islanders knew the old pirate Lambert well and knew he had some source of hidden wealth because he often used to disappear into the bush and return with money.

The treasure is reputedly worth $8,000,000 and is supposed to be buried between two waterfalls near the settlement.

Spring Crop of Politics

By Raymond Moley

POLITICS seem to be breaking out all over. The LaFollette hunters in Wisconsin are back home in the Republican party. Henry Wallace grows more and more unhappy in the party he joined a dozen or so years ago. Harold Ickes is an outside critic of his former associates. Chester Bowles is eyeing the governorship of Connecticut—presumably as a move toward 1948. And the Roosevelts, Eleanor and James, are letting it be known that an Administration policy hostile to Russia is not in the Roosevelt tradition.

Also, what is called "splinterism" is affecting the Democratic party. The new Truman group in the Administration is beset on two or more sides. The C. I. O. is none too happy—perhaps only 18½ cents happy. The Southern bloc in congress is in a temporary alliance with the Republicans. And, in addition to Messrs. Ickes and the LaFollettes, many former refugees from the Republican party are once more out in no man's land.

Birthplace for G. O. P.

Wisconsin is in a real sense a breeding ground for political movement. Ninety years ago, the Republican party found Wisconsin ready to pioneer. And no one doubts the great influence of the elder LaFollette in starting the Progressive movement, later captured by T. R. Wisconsin is no state for a stand-pat party, and we may assume that the reunited Republicans will be ideologically close to the LaFollette tradition. True, the marriage has elements of expediency. The Republicans need the LaFollettes, and the LaFollettes need the Republicans.

F. D. R. frightened the LaFollettes, just as he did many other progressives. He moved far beyond their early proposals, for regulation into the field of regimentation. He turned liberalism into a class struggle. And his aggressive foreign policy was too much for the nationalist progressives.

Henry Wallace's proposal to discipline Democrats in congress is exceedingly strange. Mr. Wallace has a bad record in the books of consistency. Would he suggest that the discipline be administered by the party leaders who unceremoniously purged him in Chicago, two years ago? Is the power to purge to be given to the President who was selected at Chicago because he was more acceptable to southern Democrats than was Mr. Wallace?

Democratic Plight

The plight of the Democrats is serious. The New Dealers have little left in their bag of politics which can hold together a coalition. And a coalition was all that F. D. R. had. There is nothing left in the bag but statistical things like the extension of social security and the budgeting of national resources and income. "Full employment" is everybody's property, because it is really nothing but a phrase. The Truman administration has the power of office and patronage. But that is a power of defense, not of aggression. Foreign policy is not encouraging as an issue, for both parties recognize that votes should not be sought by warlike moves in this present situation.

Even the Communists cannot develop a national policy, because if they propose an extreme program it will be called outsiding, and if it is mild, it will be torn with fraternal strife. About all that the old Socialists have left is their hatred of the Soviet.

"Splinterism" is the oldest disease of radical and semi-radical parties. The very nature of men like Messrs. Wallace and Ickes and the La Follettes makes them potential rebels. They are the real rugged individualists of politics. They came to fame as dissenters. They were always ready to walk alone. The psychology they acquired in their youth dies hard. Wherever they go, they will ultimately resume the wild asses' skins and the call of the wild. If they go back to the Republicans, they may make possible a victory for that party in 1948. But finally, "splinterism" will once more afflict the Republican party. The pains of the Democrats today will be the cramps of the Republicans tomorrow.

Daily Bible Thought

Great saints seldom are developed without heroic tests. "Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you; but rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings."—1 Peter 4:12, 13.

Pettigrew on the White Ant Crisis

DEAR feathered friends

As if the international scene wasn't up enough it now has white ant trouble and may even get into the hunter college gym as has never had ants before and it will be a fine kettle of fish if the first light uno gets over bugs of any color or shade paragraph

I am dizzy enough already over who and what is responsible for all the troubles here on the globe and it only complicates things to drag ants and anyhow the ants are as sore at the russians over churchill's crack and me and you in such a mess I wouldn't be surprised if the white ants yelled look who's talking paragraph

The encyclopedia says a white ant is a combination ant and cockroach which will eat the Editorial writers on pravda any less exciting but it is really a termite which is an insect that bores in the timber of a house and makes sawdust of it and the tenant doesn't know what has been going on until the third floor bathroom topples into the first floor dinette and the guilty termite is a quantity production egg laying machine but nobody should make wisecracks about this as every country and leader on earth has laid plenty of eggs lately period new paragraph

But getting back to russ a I dont blame stalin for being sore because nobody likes to be told he has no more future than a termite and after he was battling the krauts with us nobody called him a white ant and the whole Business is going to wind up with him telling england are there any better future in a flea circus and maybe telling america she is a black spider and the first thing you know uno will think she had better build a bottle traps to Get a quorum period new paragraph

President truman should come out in the interest of peace and say he doesn't think russia is any kind of ant and that even if he was one thinks ants are a good thing and anyhow he is not on the platform during the ant speech period new paragraph

It looks to me like churchill is tired out unless the ordeal of College degrees is stopped he will call mahatma gandi a horsefly and compare gnats to you to the french and I wish he would Rest on his reputation as a great warthorse peacemaker and lay low and let the world get back to yours very nervously comma

pettigrew the pergolator

"Our communist friends should start reading the modern works on the life and soul of the ant to art. That will show them not only a great deal about their past but will give a very good indication of their future."—Churchill.

Are you putting ants in the Russian bear's pants, Winnie?

The beer shortage may be so serious this summer that we will be applying for a permit to get a small glass of suds. But we can stand anything up to the point where, in order to get a schooner of beer, we are compelled to buy, at a tie-in sale, to buy a crate of sweet cider.

BANNER FOR RED PICKET LINE

Winnie was our hero
In the dark days, churn!
Now we're out of danger—
Winnie is a bum!

A rich landlord and real estate speculator who worked the old game of charging a returning veteran several thousand dollars for a few pieces of cheap furniture in order to get a small apartment got ten days in jail and a fine of $100 the other day. Our idea, if that is the maximum penalty, would be to make the landlord come across with at least $5,000 for the chair in his cell.

"People do not want any truckling to Russia, but they do want an agreement based on mutual concessions and on give and take." Harold Ickes.

Especially on the "take."

"Bob Hannegan announces that the Jackson Day dinner, although costing one hundred smackers a plate, will be a modest affair with no more caloric value than is now true of meals in suffering Europe."—News item.

The Blame

By Truman Twill

What is shifted to someone else is known as the blame and if you can't understand plain English you have only yourself to blame.

If a child turns out to be a pain in the rear it is his parents who get the blame for not giving him the proper kind of educational toys to play with when he was forming his first impressions.

If diplomats lay an egg or drop a wrench in the international gears, the blame is shifted to other diplomats for refusing to behave in a charitable and enlightened manner.

If the patient has no appetite and spots before the eyes, it is not his fault for burning the candle at both ends. The blame must be laid on vitamin deficiency or his family tree.

If service with a smile has turned to service with a grouch, the blame must not be placed on unpleasant personalities that need to be whittled down to size but labor unions.

Failure to give a customer what he wants means the blame belongs to OPA, or if not the OPA the government, bureaucracy, or the men who never met a payroll.

If people spend more than they earn and want to earn more than they are worth, they are not to blame. The blame belongs to capitalists, bankers, reactionary influences and bosses.

Whenever farmers come a cropper instead of a crop that is their cue to blame the weather, middle men, government and insects.

If the price of food goes up, city folks blame agriculturalists. If the price of food goes down agriculturalists blame city folks.

In case war is threatened, the blame is shifted to so-and-so's who live in some other country.

Depressions always are blamed on Republicans, Hoover and Republicans. Reformers are prone to pin on Franklin D. Roosevelt and New Dealers. The sour ideas of chronic dyspeptics are blamed on Communism. The failure of every mother's son to become a roaring success is blamed on the private profit system.

Bit by bit all blame is being shifted about so that no one is personally responsible for anything any more. If no one on Earth can be found to blame for what goes wrong, the blame in every case must be laid on sunspots.

And if any typographical errors appear, we blame the printers, who will blame the linotypers who will blame the editor, who will blame the day he was born for having to listen to people explain that they are never to blame, but always someone else.

American armed forces used trained dogs in war for the first time in the Marine landings at Bougainville.

The slave trade began in 1503, when Portuguese landed the first shipment of Negroes in Santo Domingo.

The Other Prodigal

A Sermonette
By REV. L. V. BAUGESS
Pastor of Forest Lawn Presbyterian Church

Luke 15 25-32

THE PHARISEES would have felt more comfortable if the parable of the Prodigal Son had ended with, "They began to be merry." Why didn't it end here? In Luke 15 there are three parables of the lost, but the last would not have been complete without that of the Elder Brother for it also, as a parable of the "lost" it is for the wayward who "never take the far journey, and the self-righteous don't like it.

Humble Christians tire of the 'gross sins that' people don't commit. Do you ever hear these? "I don't deny my church" I don't rob God", "I don't neglect to speak a good word for Christ" Maybe we should rearrange our list of gross sins" Christ talked more about the "we ghter matters" that are never performed than about the cardinal sins committed"

This Elder Brother has some good points all of which he will need His father's word was at His law so far as the record goes He seemed to accept his father's division of the estate will out much fuss the e being little else he could do He was dutiful obedient and dependable He could be depended upon to harvest the corn without wasting an ear or to transact a business deal with a maximum profit But for all this his service was cold mechanical and heartless and only the Ten Commandments had been written

What Was His Trouble?

He was farther away than the Prodigal—in his father's house yet he was always out Would you call this a willful form of hypocrisy or is it the deepest spiritual decay" What did he know of fellowship love good will" The Prodigal was dead and knew it he was dead and didn't know it The Prodigal evil exposed his sin while the Elder suppressed his and fed that he didn't have it He hadn't put away his filthy things that he might become a man He was just a spoiled child who hadn't grown up Christianity is not petty—it calls for bigness Nor was he really a brother Like he will have rejoiced with his father The angels in heaven must have been grievously ashamed of him He was a pouter unsympathetic, and unbrotherly

The Deeper Trouble

IF WAS UNGRATEFUL "son thou art ever with me and all that I have is thine If he forgot en" The Pharisees too had full access to the riches of the kingdom but they couldn't see beyond their own skins The prodigal had a good heart and plenty of everything except a thankful heart He was joyful because he had no gratitude Joy is the key note of Christianity Of monstrous ingratitude King Lear because of the ungratefulness of his two daughters Goneril and Regan wandered aimlessly over the gloomy heath giving utterance to his broken crushed heart with only God and the storm of wind rain and lightning to listen He had learned how sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have a thankless child To be thankless is to forget God's mercy at Lgoodness This is what Joseph meant when he said to Potiphar's wife How then can I do this great wickedness and sin against God?" —Gen 39 9 Scarlet gave his life to right the wrongs and improve the morals of his people whose only thanks were to condemn him to death and impell him to drink poison Columbus was sent home in chains from the country he had discovered He died one of the poorest men of the kingdom he had given his life to enrich Ingratitude! Yes but what about this? Jesus came to earth, ready abundantly to bless and not only 'went about doing good', but on the cross He freely and voluntarily gave His life pay the ransom that there might be an everlasting flow of joy and eternal life for every man, woman and child Yet while that stream of life still flows many are saying these many years do I serve thee, They should be saying 'Father, I have sinned and am no more worthy While only a small spring was opened up for the Prodigal a river of blessing had ever flowed for the elder brother O thankless and ungrateful heart of him who sees not his plenty nor the hand of His Benefactor'

He was LOVELESS Love is a fire that goes out if it does not kindle others If I speak in the tongues of men and of angels but have not love, I am a noisy gong or a clanging cymbal If I give away all I have and if I deliver my body to be burned, but have not love, I gain nothing" "Love does not insist on its own way, it is not irrational or resentful" —I Cor. 13 How many had the elder brother loved back to the Father" He was always at home, yet never at home, for home is a place of comradeship, confidence, sympathy, joy, love. He couldn't bear to see others make good We detect here one of those deadly diseases of the heart Jealousy is good soil for hate, and jealous fear of being out done. Had he forgotten John the Baptist, who said of Jesus, "He must increase, but I must decrease"? Jealously is good for hate, and even anger, although the latter is subjective and may be entirely independent of either of the

BUT who is this relating the Parable of the Elder Brother" He is the Savior of the world He came from His Father's House to this country and marked the way by which all prodigals may return to our heavenly home His cross beckons on Calvary and there is a cross in every return The doors of the Father's House are still open He that cometh unto Me I will in no wise cast out Go to Him now Better to go to Him now while He waits with open arms than to seek vainly for admittance at that door which shall be closed against every ungrateful loveless, unforgiving self-righteous prodigal Jesus pleads with the Elder Brother also for He came to find him, as well as the Prodigal He is asking him to come to himself' consider his lost condition as he 'perishes with hunger', and to come back over the same road of repentance with his younger brother

TRUMAN BILLED FOR HARD-HITTING SPEECH

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, March 23 — President Truman was billed today for a hard-hitting speech to keynote his party's Jackson day dinners throughout the nation.

The White House disclosed it would be the Chief Executive's first avowed political address since becoming President, and an aide said it would be front page talk, both hard hitting and "progressive."

Secretary Wallace will also speak.

Mr. Truman's 2,000-word speech will be delivered at the main $100 a plate banquet here at 10:15 p. m. (EST) following the commerce secretary's 12-minute address.

National radio networks will carry the two principal addresses to the other dinner rallies, in which an estimated 150,000 Democrats will participate across the country.

A record-breaking audience—close to 2,000—was expected at the local dinner, where tickets go to those contributing $100 to party campaign chests.

The 1346 dinners find the party still bucking a rather successful anti-congressional opposition of Republicans and a group of southern Democrats — a combination National Chairman Robert E. Hannegan has referred to as a "politically irresponsible" coalition or "class compact."

period will be in the nature of a trial period, according to Mr. Uncapher. It will probably be extended, he said, unless need is shown for a better legal instrument to provide the township with fire protection.

The city fire department has been answering some township fire calls in the past, Mr. Uncapher said. It was, however, desired to put the relationship on a legal basis to afford the city protection in case of accidents to individuals or equipment and to relieve some of the burden of fire protection from city taxpayers.

Akron Strikers Study Wage Offer

By The Associated Press

AKRON, O., March 23—A walkout of 170 striking CIO unionists employed by the Imperial Electric Co. entered its second day as union officials considered a company-offered wage increase today.

Officials of the CIO United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers' local, which struck yesterday to enforce demands for a $2-a-day wage increase, blamed the walkout on failure of former union local representative and present company Vice President J. K. Smith to obtain a pay raise in negotiation of a work contract.

Joseph Kres, district union representative, declared Smith negotiated a contract last Jan. 20 providing no wage raise, and that Smith was promoted to company vice president in charge of labor relations on the following day. The company has offered an immediate five-cent hourly increase with an additional five-cent boost within a few weeks, Kres reported.

Mine Peace Hopes Not Too Bright

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, March 23—John L. Lewis and soft coal operators were reported far apart today on a new contract for 400,000 miners although the April 1 deadline for a possible nation-wide strike crept closer.

Next week evidently was going to be crucial, for a decision to recess the bargaining negotiations until Monday clipped two days from the nine remaining for working out an agreement on demands of United Mine Workers for better wage, hours and welfare provisions.

With the time so short, most operators were pessimistic about the possibility of averting a strike by arranging a new contract or negotiating an extension of the present one.

Operators still were consulting on the issues in an effort to form a solid front, and indications were that these conferences would continue throughout the week-end.

REFUGEES AND FOOD DEBATED BY UNNRA

By The Associated Press

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., March 23—Delegates to UNRRA's council meeting today took up the long-simmering dispute over what to do with hundreds of thousands of war-scattered refugees who do not want to go home.

This issue, involving more than 500,000 "displaced persons," reacted the council floor today while representatives of 47 nations pondered their primary question—how to eke out from the world's available food supplies enough to feed a hungry world.

Most of them privately, some of them publicly, stated their belief that it just could not be done, with the result that sentiment is mounting here for a formal recommendation that peoples from ex-enemy countries must stand last in the queue for food relief.

Quietly, behind the scenes, a move to bring the United States back to war time rationing of commodities in short supply—particularly cereals, fats and oils—was gathering momentum despite a claim by Secretary of Agriculture Anderson that such a step would prove "impractical."

HEALTH DIRECTOR ISSUES WARNING

Says Septic Tank Cleaners Operating Illegally.

A warning to Marion county property owners to beware of strangers illegally representing themselves as vault and septic tank cleaners was issued today by Dr. N. Sifritt, county health commissioner.

Dr. Sifritt said there are indications that several persons now in Marion county were not only misrepresenting themselves as vault and septic tank cleaners, but were also dumping their wastes along public highways. State law requires persons engaged in vault and septic tank cleaning to have written permission from the county health department.

The health commissioner also said there were several persons in the district who were illegally offering septic tanks for sale. County sanitary regulations, passed by the board of health, require every person installing a septic tank in the Marion County General Health District to first obtain a written permit from the health commissioner.

The permit is free and the sanitarian will call at the home or business of the property owner and help him choose the proper location for his home sewage disposal system. Dr. Sifritt urges all property owners to contact the county health department before installing a septic tank.

The health department makes inspections twice a year of septic tanks in schools and other public buildings, and will upon request, inspect those installed in private homes.

OHIO'S BROWN WON'T QUIT FOR G.O.P. POST

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, March 23 — Clarence Brown of Blanchester won't resign from the house to become Republican national chairman. He's telling colleagues so despite considerable talk that he would succeed Chairman Herbert Brownell who resigned.

Brown would accept the job if he could handle it by taking a leave of absence from congress to direct the congressional campaigns. But the national committee apparently wants the new boss to be "full time" without having to worry about other chores.

Rep. Al Welchel of Sandusky says the OPA is interfering with efforts of war veterans to get in business. He read to the house a letter from a veteran complaining that the OPA refused him a quota of sugar for a store he could lease. The agency contended, Welchel said, that the veteran was not entitled to sugar because he did not own the store equipment.

Iranian Protest Gets No. 3 Spot at UNO Conference Monday

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, March 23 — Consideration of the Iranian complaint against Russia was handed a high priority today on the provisional agenda of the United Nations security council, which is due to open its session Monday.

The Iranian question, concerning the country's protest against the continued presence of Soviet troops on its territory in alleged violation of a tripartite treaty, was listed as item No. 3 in the agenda which will be submitted to the 11-nation group.

Rearrangement of the schedule can be made after the meeting opens, however, so as to give the case immediate consideration, according to UNO General Secretary Trygve Lie. This would be in accordance with a request by Edward R. Stettinius, U. S. delegate, who has urged that the dispute be first on the calendar.

But listed ahead of the Iranian case now was the report on rules of procedure and a report on rules for the military staff committee.

Reds Say They'll Quit Manchuria by May 1

By The Associated Press

CHUNKING, March 23 — The Russian government has promised to withdraw all Soviet forces from Manchuria not later than the end of April, foreign minister Wang Shih-chieh told the people's political council today.

Wang said the information was contained in a note from the Russian government received yesterday.

He added that the communication was in reply to a Chinese diplomatic note sent to Moscow March 6 asking when Russian forces would be withdrawn.

Pressed for details, Wang promised to give the council a written report of negotiations with Russia over Manchuria.

Government sources said it was not likely the evacuation of Manchuria would include the treaty port, Dairen, which the Russians are garrisoning heavily, or Port Arthur, over which the Soviets were given control in the Sino-Soviet treaty.

Wang's announcement was the first indication of Russia's intentions in Manchuria since a Red army commander at Mukden said Soviet troops would leave "certainly no later" than American forces were withdrawn from China.

FARM AGENT IS SUED IN OHIOAN'S DEATH

By The Associated Press

WARREN, O., March 23—A federal department of agriculture agent was charged in a $100,000 damage suit today with causing the wife of a dairy farm owner to become ill and die of a heart attack.

Temple McAllister, who operates a farm of some 1,200 acres near here, made the accusations yesterday in a common pleas court suit against Thomas E. Maulsby. The local AAA office here identified Maulsby as a federal agriculture agent working out of the Chicago office.

In his complaint, McAllister, alleged that Maulsby came to his farm Thursday and by "unlawful, malicious and illegal conduct" caused his 50-year-old wife to suffer a fatal heart attack later in the day.

The federal agent, the suit contended, called one of the McAllister's employes a liar and a "vile and indecent name" upon being ordered to leave the barn where the man was working "purposely . . . drove his automobile over the plaintiff's lawn when he saw Mrs. McAllister hanging up clothes in the back yard."

McAllister said Maulsby came to the barn "under the guise of seeking information," but that "his real purpose has been to undermine the plaintiff's business."

McAllister did not explain in the action what type of testimony the agent allegedly attempted to obtain.

Maulsby was not available for comment at a hotel which reported he had checked out.

CANADA'S REDS HELD PART OF SPY RING

By The Associated Press

MONTREAL, March 23—Igor Gouzenko, the government's key witness in the Soviet espionage case, testified yesterday that the Communist party in Canada was used as a part of the Moscow-directed spy network.

He said the Canada - Soviet friendship organizations were used as a "screen for the purpose of preparing for future events which could be the grounds for war."

Russia, Gouzenko said, was pursuing a "two-face policy" in which the friendship organizations "had nothing to do with creating friendly relations with Canada." He charged, moreover, that Russian security police are operating in Canada and that some are in the Soviet embassy.

Gouzenko, 26-year-old former code clerk at the Soviet embassy in Ottawa, who turned over to the Canadian government the principal documents on which the current spy inquiry is based, was making his first public appearance since placing himself under police guard last fall.

Having told authorities he feared for his life, Gouzenko was spirited into police court by six stalwart Royal Canadian mounted police plain clothesmen, who ranged themselves behind him throughout the two hours of his testimony at a morning session.

Gouzenko was the first witness against Fred Rose, Communist member of parliament accused as an intermediary in the espionage operation. Rose's wife sat in the spectators' benches. It was a preliminary hearing to establish whether the government has a sufficient case for the trial.

GROUP HEARS TALK ON NEW TESTAMENT VERSION

Miss Margaret Huffman Speaks at U. B. Church.

A talk on the new version of the New Testament recently published, was given by Miss Margaret Huffman at a luncheon meeting of the United Christian Youth movement in First U. B. church community house yesterday noon. Miss Huffman and Rev. R. W. Faulkner, pastor of Calvary Evangelical church and pastoral advisor of the interdenominational youth group, read verse by the verse the thirteenth chapter of the book of First Corinthians. Each verse was read first from the old King James version of the New Testament, then from the new Standard Revised version, illustrating modernization of the language, bringing out the modern meaning of the word "charity," which is "love," in this chapter which has come to be known as the "love" chapter of the Bible.

Miss Huffman, director of religious education of Epworth Methodist church, spoke of the long years of work, 1930 to 1946, of 31 men, university professors, who were given the assignment of preparing the new version of the New Testament by the International Council of Religious education. She pointed out that after many conferences and deliberations these men felt they had presented the books of the New Testament in the best possible manner for clear understanding by its readers. Emphasizing the point that only the language of the books has been modernized, with all the fundamental beliefs expressed by the words, kept intact, she stated that each reader of the new translation is a member of a "court and a jury" which is "trying" it to determine if it shall be accepted and will take its place with the other great versions of the Bible.

Announcement was made of a meeting Sunday afternoon, April 28, when Dr. Clarence T. Craig of Oberlin college, one of the 31 men who worked on the new translation of the New Testament, will be in Marion to speak, and to tell many things about the work on the new translation, and the "human interest" side of the work. Paul McAllister presided and led group singing which was accompanied by Carolyn Burdell at the piano. Rev. Garrison Roebuck was host pastor. Approximately 50 were served by women of the host church who prepared the meal.
